SIR,-The writer on this subject in your issue 10,000.00 of this morning would have readers at a dis-84,505.78 tanco believe that a really good secondary education is to be obtained in Hongkong, while the fact is, I contend, that even a fair elementary one is not attainable unless the pupil can teach himself, a fact which the late report of the 54,917.64 acting head master of the Central School, if properly read, goes, I think, to prove. Many lacs of dollars have been spent on this institution, and what is the result? They practically don't teach chemistry or drawing at all they cannot get more than one or two boys beyond the conjugations in Latin, and they never teach algebra beyond quadratic equations trigonometry none of the pupils want, while even plane geometry they may repeat like parrots, but not one out of a hundred really understands sufficiently to have his mind dis-

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

While encamped near the Mair Glacier for seven weeks of last summer, Mr. H. B. Luomis and Prof. Muir watched the formation of icebergs. The dropping of the blocks from the terminal wall occurred at very irregular intervals of five minutes to an hour, the fall of no less than 129 having been heard one day in 12 hours. At times, especially in heavy rains, the reports sounded in camp, at a distance of mile, like those of a thunderstorm or cannonade. Sometimes the detached block bursts into fragments, and falls like a cascade. At another time a block sinks unbroken into the water, rises, perhaps 250 feet, even with the top of the glacier, then topples over on its side with a heavy roar, throwing spray in all directions, and wallows among the other icebergs like a gigantic

A study of the effects of excessive coffeedrinking has been made by Dr. Mendel, of Berlin, among the working population of Essen, Prussia. The wonen there are exceptionally fond of coffee, many of them using individually more than a pound a week. Among the effects produced are profound depression, headache, insomnia, partial loss of power over the muscles, increasing aversion to inbour, irregular action of the heart, and dyspepsia. Acute inflammation is likely to occur. Too great use of coffee not only gives rise to these symptoms, but seems to create an appetite for opium and

Dr. McPherson states that it has been con clusively proven that distilled water is of a blue colour. A demonstration of the fact may be had by lowering into water a metal tube, open at the top and closed at the bettem with a clear glass plate, close to a white object 20 feet below the surface. Looked at through the tube, this object has a beautiful blue colour, whereas it would appear yellow if its colour were due to light reflected by suspended particles in the water.
